Non-residual Conflicts. For an Integration of Emanuela Ceva's Proposal

Abstract: Emanuela Ceva's remarkable amendment to political liberalism ushers in more tenable notions of value and conflict. Yet, in this note I claim that they could be reinforced. In particular, I contend that values are manifestations of a deeper interplay of belief and practice. Based on this, I advance a more radical view of conflicts as productive of political identities. The text concludes by explaining why this integration to the notions of value and conflict might benefit Ceva's theoretical project.

Keywords: Conflict, Identity, Liberalism, Pluralism, Value.
