The Debate and the Regulatory Innovations on End-of-life Decisions through the Lens of the Dichotomy “Anavailability/Availability of Life” in the thought of Giovanni Fornero

Abstract: After some considerations useful to highlight the relevance of the analysis realized by Fornero in his last book, the author proposes some critical remarks about the understanding of the refusal of life saving treatments as rooted in the right to die. Moreover, she argues for a justification of the right to the assisted death based on the right of each ill person to be relieved from suffering, as well as on the right to self-determination.

Keywords: End of life decisions, Law, Availability of Life, Anavailability of life, Self determination.
