Freedom to Give Oneself? A Critique of the ‘Mystique of Gift’ in Altruistic Surrogacy

Abstract: This article critically engages with Valentina Pazé’s book Libertà in vendita. Il corpo fra scelta e mercato, centering on her exploration of altruistic surrogacy. The discussion delves into Pazé’s insights concerning the intricate narratives of altruism, freedom, and contractual obligations. In contrast to the author’s stance, the article advocates for the legitimacy and legal regulation of commercial surrogacy. The analysis seeks to offer a nuanced understanding of Pazé’s perspective and its implications within the broader discourse on reproductive practices.

Keywords: Surrogacy, Reproductive labor, Women’ bodies, Health, Self-determination.
