Reverse Retirement: Justifying Pensions for Young People on Justice-Based Grounds

Abstract: In reverse retirement systems the young are entitled to retirement pensions for some years, which implies postponing their entrance in the labour market. Gregory Ponthiere defends reverse retirement on justice-based grounds. In this note I reconstruct Ponthiere's justice-based justification of reverse retirement and I elaborate on (1) the sense of injustice of the victims of longevity inequalities and on (2) the paternalist objection to reverse retirement.

Keywords: Reverse retirement, Labour market, Social insurance, Paternalism, Sense of injustice.
