

Marco Stampa

49 years old, Italian, graduate in Political Sciences (Economic specialization) at University of Rome; he has also a diploma specialization in Environmental Policy and Law.

After being awarded a scholarship by Eni in the years 1985-87, he worked on R&D Management in the Finalized Projects “Energy” and “Advanced Materials” of National Research Council of Italy; he was also a consultant for ENEA (Italian National Body for Energy and Environmental Technologies) and UNI (Italian Standardization Body).

Employed at Eni S.p.A. since 1992, Marco Stampa has a long experience in environmental reporting, environmental management systems and certifications, audit and environmental impact assessment regulation and methodologies. He has been also project manager of HSE corporate accountability and information systems.

During his experience in the oil and gas field he has been trainer in many corporate and academy courses. In the 2001-2002 he was the project manager for the Strategic Impact Assessment at Agip Kazakhstan Operating Company (Agip KCO) for the North Caspian Sea oil fields development (the so-called “Kashagan Project”).

He is currently Stakeholder Engagement Manager in the Sustainability office at Public Affairs & Communication Dept. at Eni Corporate headquarter in Rome, focusing his commitment on Sustainability issues like Social Impact Assessment, local development, transparency, Human Rights etc. and stakeholder engagement at both global and local level. Part of his job is also dedicated to contribute to the Sustainability reporting and rating for Eni.

He is also member of national and international organizations (like IPIECA, International Petroleum Industry Environment Conservation Association; Business for Social Responsibility, etc.) social issues working groups.